

Abstract

The present invention relates to methods for identifying agents useful for alleviating insulin resistance in mammals, said methods being enabled by the finding that the insulin receptor substrate 1 (IRS-1) and histone deacetylase 2 (HDAC2) physically interact. By inhibition of the deacetylase activity in this complex, the insulin sensitivity can be restored.

30152697.doc